TRUSTEES ACCEPT JESUP BEQUEST

Seventy-two Paintings Selected -Egyptian Rooms Rearranged.

Edward Robinson, director of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, announced yesterday that the trustees at a recent meeting accepted the bequest of the late Mrs. Morris K. Jesup, in which she gives to the museum a permanent fund of $100,000, to be known as the "Morris K. Jesup Fund," the income of which is to be used for the encouragement of American art in any way the trustees may think best. As a condition of the museum accepting whatever paintings they choose to select from those left by herself and her late husband, Mrs. Jesup also bequeathed an additional $50,000 as a permanent fund to keep which was appointed recently, came in the collection in repair.

The museum has selected and accepted seventy-two paintings, including canvases by Corot, Daubigne, Millet, Constable, Diaz, Reynolds and Gainsborough. These are to be placed on exhibition in March.

Chief among the accessions of 1914 to the department of classical art in the museum is a magnificent bronze portrait head, probably of Agrippa, the illustrious general and son-in-law of Augustus. It was found in 1904 during the excavations at Susa, near Turin. Another is a Roman portrait female bust of the Trajanic period. Other accessions are two colossal tomb vases dating from the eighth century. The Egyptian rooms have been rearranged. The fourth room is taken up with the mummies and coffins of Ukh-hotep and others. The adjoining room has been devoted entirely to the twelfth dynasty funerary equipment of Senebtisi, found at Lisht by the museum's expedition. In the sixth room are shown examples of the funerary furniture of the whole Empire period and sculpture of the mineteenth dynasty. Royal statuettes of King Sessettis I have also been recently acquired.

Regarding the loss of the J. P. Morgan collection of Chinese porcelains, which has been acquired by the Duvcen Brothers, Mr. Robinson, speaking for the trustees, said:

1 would be tidle to pretent to minimize the disappoinment which all of us who are connected with menual and the Museum of Natural History.

He pointed out that roller skating on the streets and the use of glaring headlights on automobiles were two dangerous practices which could be regulated in the user of public safety, and encouraged night traffle from terminals and storage plants and in wholesale deliveries.

Dr. William H. Tolman, director of the museum, read a letter from President William H. Tolman, director of the safety campaign. In it he said that "the conservation of human life through the prevention of accidents and the safety administration of health engaged his depest interest."

The principal address of the evening was made by Dudley M. Holman, Commissioner of the Massachusetts Industrial Accident Board. He told of the influence exerted by the Museum of Art and the Museum of Natural History.
